Touch Therapy Techniques for treating People dealing with Cancer

This 7 day course is dedicated to understanding and practicing integrated palliative care for people dealing with cancer through touch therapy. With Roni Gilboa

In this course we will talk honestly and without fear about issues that are characteristic to the oncology environment – what is cancer; what happens to the body when cancer strikes; what are the emotional, mental and spiritual aspects; what are the standard and innovative courses of treatment in conventional medicine; what are their side effects; what are the phases that cancer patients experience; what is palliative care;

But mostly the course is based on hands-on practice of touch therapy techniques that apply to the oncological environment, treating various side effects, trauma, pain management, lack of sleep, neuropathy, etc.

Even though these techniques are deeply rooted in traditional Thai Massage and Thai Acupressure, in this course we will explore the fascinating and intriguing opportunities that present themselves when these traditions interact with the more modern methods of Shiatsu and Fascia Manipulation.

We will practice attentive presence, therapeutic intent and flexibility, we will navigate through the integrative approach, we will dance, meditate, exercise Qui Gong and we will explore our own therapeutic stance when facing life threatening illness.

The course incorporates knowledge and experience accumulated over more than eight years; treating thousands of patients at the hospital and at the community clinic; evidence based treatments affiliated with Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center in New York, and the insight of my teachers throughout the years.

Everyone with a background in Thai massage is welcome.
